Here is my testimonial...

Almost every great athlete , musician and artistic performer has a coach. Tiger Woods is reported to have had five coaches at one time.

Operating a busy law office which involves managing employees, suppliers, budgets and an infinite number of issues and demands and, at the same time maintaining a busy trial schedule which involves dealing with judges, adverse lawyers, witnesses, doctors, insurance adjusters and others whose goal it is to defeat you at every turn is significantly more difficult than playing golf.

If the greatest golfer in the world sees the need to have multiple coaches, would it bruise your ego to have a coach?

I have found the perfect coaching combination in Samy Chong and Larry Levin.

Having these coaches has caused me to cut through the clutter, see the overall picture more clearly and focus in on areas of my practice which most need improving. The coaching sessions with Samy and Larry have forced me to stand back and take an objective look at the weaknesses of my practice. In many ways, this has been a painful process but a very necessary one.

In the weekly coaching sessions conducted by conference telephone calls Larry and Samy hold me accountable to accomplish the goals which they helped me set. They enforce the discipline that I needed to turn my practice around.

I highly recommend this team of coaches especially for trial lawyers. These talented philosophers bring to the table the wisdom of the great teachings of inspirational writers and philosophers and, just as important, their vast experience in operating successful businesses and in founding and operating the premier workers compensation and personal injury law firm in Pennsylvania.
